Privileges to Canorists.—Instructions have been sent to the customs officers on the northern frontier to pass free of duty the canoes and necessary outfits of Canadian canoeists who may visit this country for the purpose of attending the meet of the American Canoe Association to be held on Lake Champlain during the month of August. The visitors will, however, be required to make the usual oath in regard to their effects, but will not be required to give bond for the return of their canoes.

To reduce their rates to the very minimum. The hotels and bourding houses, with which Washington is better supplied than any other city in the country, have agreed not to advance prices beyond regular rates, so that no fear need be entertained of any extortion or imposition upon our visitors on the part of the hotels, boarding houses or any one else.

The citizens offer a hearty welcome to their splendid city, and it can be safely predicted that if the encampment is held here amidst such impressive surroundings it will be the most notable returns of any war ever held in any city of the world.

AN INVITATION TO THE G. A. R. Reasons for Holding the Encampment Here as Officially Set Forth.

to hold its national encampment in this city in 1892:

The citizens of Washington, the capital of the nation, extend to the Grand Army of the Republic a hearty invitation to hold its national encampment in 1892 in this city.

It is needless to speak of the welcome the veterans of the Union will receive when they come to Washington. There is no city in the world that would not be proud to receive them and there is no city in the land which Washington would permit to outdo it in honoring and entertaining the Grand Army. The citizens of Washington were glad enough when the boys in blue came there in 1861. They will make them feel more than welcome if they will come again in 1832—come again and see a city that is four times as large as then and a thousand times as beautiful. As an earnest of their hospitable intentions an ample guarantee fund has been subscribed to provide for appropriate entertainment of members of the encampment and for the usual expenses of such assemblages.

This invitation is extended with a helical on the citizens of the encampment for Washington. They give a picnic and camp fire at the Schuetzen Park tonight, the proceeds of which will be used in entertaining and presenting the claims of Washington at Detroit. Speeches will be made by a number of prominent men.

The executive committee will hold an important meeting at 4 o'clock p.m. today in parlor 10, Willard's.

Washington may have a new competitor in the city of Philadelphia for the honor of entertaining the encampment next year. At a meeting of the representatives of Grand Army posts in that city yesterday the question of extending an invitation was discussed, but not finally decided, it being an invitation was discussed, but not finally decided, it being an invitation was discussed by the individual posts. Some of the posts preferred going away from home to an encampment.

REPRESENTATIVE CLARKE TALKS. for the usual expenses of such assemblager This invitation is extended with a belief on th part of the citizens that, great as is their desire to welcome to their homes the men who fough for the Union, there are many thousands of veterans who have a desire equally as strong to visit Washington and the battlefields in its vicinity—ground consecrated by the valor of the soldiers of the Union.

Washington is the capital of the nation. It is the most beautiful city on the continent. It is stored with objects of variotic interest and is stored with objects of patriotic interest, and while the attractions of its public buildings, its while the attractions of its public buildings, its beautiful streets, its parks and monuments, its museums and the presence of the government appeal strongly to all classes, there are historic associations that put Washington far beyond comparison with other cities in the interest of the veteran of the war. On every hill around it are the footprints of the war. A few miles away is the field of Bull Run, where the soldiers of the Union got their first stern lesson in war.

field of Bull Run, where the soldiers of the Union got their first stern lesson in war.

It is but a pleasant day's excursion to the field of Antietam. It is a short and easy journey to the great battle ground of Gettysburg, where the tide of war was turned. Washington is at the center of an historic region whose towns and streams bear names that call up vivid memories of battle. In this region, all within the radius of a day's journey, lie all the famous fields on which the Army of the Potomac fought its great battles, from Bull Run to Appomattox. The G. A. R. posts here will be called upon to do considerable in the way of entertaining visiting comrades in case the encampment came here and will not be asked to subscribe to the general fund. Still the G. A. R. men are actively at work and will do much at Detroit to secure the encampment for Washington.

THE CASE OF LIEUT. MEIGS. Retiring Board for Color Blindness.

Lieut. John F. Meigs, U. S. N., has been ordered before the retiring board for examination as to his fitness for retirement from active duty. This is the beginning of the end of a case that has interested naval officers to an unusual degree lately. Lieut. Meigs, who is a son of Maj. Gen. M. C. Meigs, U. S. A., retired, is regarded by all as an officer of great ability, and his work as an expert in ordnance matters has attracted general attention. When his turn came for examination for promotion to the grade of lieutenant commander, about six weeks ago, he was found to be color blind to his own great surprise. His work had not necessitated a use of color sight to any extent and his defect had. nation for promotion to the grade of lieutenant commander, about six weeks ago, he was found to be color blind to his own great surprise. His work had not necessitated a use of color sight to any extent, and his defect had never been noticed before. Under ordinary circumstances an officer in such a plight would be retired at once, as the law is very explicit in stipulating that a single defect in the physical condition of a candidate for promotion shall be sufficient to cause his retirement. But it was urged by the many and influential friends of Lieut. Meigs who besieged the Secretary in his behalf that the law might be abrogated in this case with safety in view of the excellence of Meige' services and of the misapplication of the defect to his present line of duties. A greater part of the old navy brought influence to bear on the Secretary, and by this means the case was left open for some time.

On the other hand the law officers of the department pointed out the fact that a single exception, made for even so excellent an officer as Lieut. Meigs, would leave a large loophole for the future action and would form a very dearways pracedent. There could be no defias Lieut. Meigs, would leave a large loophole for the future action and would form a very dangerous precedent. There could be no definite line drawn, these officers asserted, that would separate the essential from the non-essential defects. While Lieut. Meigs might never need his color sight in time of peace, there could be no assurance that he would serve in ordnance work always. He might be required to navigate or command a vessel, and then he would be at a disadvantage.

These and other arguments finally prevailed and the Secretary yesterday settled the case by ordering the officer before the retiring board. Lieut. Meigs has been in the service twenty-nine years, of which thirteen years have been spent at sea.

startling story of another mutiny in the British army. Strange to remark the facts seem to have been kept quiet up to the present, and stranger still it is again one of the famed foot guard regiments which finds itself in trouble. According to the story in Truth this third serious mutiny among the guards during the past year or so occurred in the second battalion of the Coldstream Guards. Hardinge, K. C. B. The second battalion of this regiment has been quartered at Wellington barracks, Birdeage Walk, close to Buckingham palace, where it has been furnishing the guard of honor, and incidentally during the recent visit of the Emperor William of Germany to London, taking a prominent part in the parades, reviews and processions which were arranged in honor of the imperial visitor. This work naturally necessitated a considerable amount of extra duty, which was far from being pleasant to the guardsmen, who have long been the pets, some people say "speiled pets," of the British army.
